NHeLP has launched a series of health reform advocacy webinars as part of our education and technical support for low-income advocates. The webinars provide advocates with important information on how health reform will affect vulnerable people and where advocates' voices need to be heard. NHeLP lawyers will explain important provisions of the new law, discuss issues that are already arising, and will provide insights and some suggested solutions to the challenges health care reform presents. The series is aimed toward legal services, disability rights, and pro bono counsel who are working with low-income people.

NHeLP's first Health Reform Advocacy Webinar Series is presented in five parts and provides introductory and overview information, while at the same time delving into detail on selected provisions.
