

Deborah Reid joined the Washington, D.C. office of NHeLP as a Senior Attorney in 2005. Debbie works on health-related congressional and legislative developments, particularly as they relate to Medicaid, racial and ethnic health disparities, women's health and reproductive rights, health information technology, and language access issues. Prior to coming to NHeLP, Debbie was an attorney advisor in the Office of the General Counsel of the U.S. Commission on Civil Rights in Washington, D.C. She also worked as a senior health care program planner analyst at the New York City Health and Hospitals Corporation (HHC), as well as a coordinating manager and an administrative resident at a HHC facility. Debbie earned her J.D. from Rutgers University School of Law - Newark; her master's of professional studies in health services administration from the New School for Social Research (Milano - The New School for Management and Policy); and her B.A. in Sociology from Rutgers College of Rutgers University.

Back to Staff...