ORDER AND JUDGMENT*

Before KELLY, LUCERO, and MATHESON, Circuit Judges.

Kathleen Sebelius, Secretary of Department of Health and Human Services ("HHS"), appeals the district court's order granting the plaintiffs' motion for a preliminary injunction barring enforcement of an HHS regulation requiring employerprovided group health plans to cover certain contraceptive drugs and services. Exercising jurisdiction under 28 U.S.C. § 1292(a)(1), we affirm.

I. BACKGROUND

Hercules Industries, Inc., a for-profit Colorado corporation, and five of its controlling shareholders and/or officers (collectively, the "Newlands") brought suit in Colorado district court seeking an exemption from an HHS regulation requiring that employer-provided health plans cover all contraceptive drugs and services approved by the Food and Drug Administration (the "Regulation"). 45 C.F.R. § 147.130(a). Hercules and the Newlands contend that compliance with the Regulation would violate their sincerely held religious beliefs about contraceptives.

* After examining appellant's brief and the appellate record, and in accord with our order dated August 12, 2013, this panel has determined unanimously that oral argument would not materially assist the determination of this appeal. See Fed. R. App. P. 34(a)(2) and 10th Cir. R. 34.1(G). The case is therefore ordered submitted without oral argument. This order and judgment is not binding precedent, except under the doctrines of law of the case, res judicata, and collateral estoppel. It may be cited, however, for its persuasive value consistent with Fed. R. App. P. 32.1 and 10th Cir. R. 32.1.

The plaintiffs sought a preliminary injunction barring HHS from enforcing the Regulation against them, claiming that the Regulation substantially burdens their religious exercise in violation of the Religious Freedom Restoration Act of 1993 ("RFRA"), 42 U.S.C. § 2000bb-1. The district court granted the preliminary injunction, and HHS timely appealed.

After both parties had filed their briefs, this court decided Hobby Lobby v. Sebelius, 723 F.3d 1114 (10th Cir. 2013) (en banc). That case involved materially similar facts and resolved questions of law applicable to this case. In Hobby Lobby, two forprofit corporations (collectively, "Hobby Lobby") and their individual owners challenged the same Regulation on RFRA grounds. This court reversed an Oklahoma district court's denial of Hobby Lobby's request for preliminary injunction, holding that the corporations were "persons" within the meaning of RFRA; that compliance with the Regulation would substantially burden the corporations' religious exercise; and that the Regulation was not narrowly tailored to achieve a compelling interest. Id. at 1121, 1128, 1142-43.

The en banc court therefore determined that the Hobby Lobby plaintiffs had satisfied two of the four preliminary injunction factors: (1) they were substantially likely to succeed on the merits of their RFRA claim, id. at 1145; and (2) they would suffer irreparable injury without the injunction, id. at 1146. We remanded to the district court to consider the remaining two preliminary injunction factors: (3) whether the likely harm to plaintiffs without the preliminary injunction outweighed the likely harm to HHS as a result of the injunction; and (4) whether the injunction was adverse to the public interest. Id. at 1121-22, 1146; see also Awad v. Ziriax, 670 F.3d 1111, 1125 (10th Cir. 2012) (reciting the preliminary injunction factors).

HHS has filed a petition for certiorari with the Supreme Court, seeking review of our Hobby Lobby decision. Petition for Writ of Certiorari, Sebelius v. Hobby Lobby, No. 13-354 (U.S. Sept. 19, 2013). This petition remains pending as of the date of this order and judgment. For the reasons discussed below, we affirm the district court's preliminary injunction order and remand with instructions to abate further proceedings pending the Supreme Court's completion of its consideration of the Hobby Lobby case.

II. DISCUSSION

We review a district court's decision to grant a preliminary injunction for abuse of discretion. See Awad, 670 F.3d at 1125. "To obtain a preliminary injunction, [Hercules] must show that four factors weigh in [its] favor: (1) [it] is substantially likely to succeed on the merits; (2) [it] will suffer irreparable injury if the injunction is denied; (3) [its] threatened injury outweighs the injury the opposing party will suffer under the injunction; and (4) the injunction would not be adverse to the public interest." Id. (quotations omitted).

A. Likelihood of Success on the Merits

The district court granted a preliminary injunction without determining whether Hercules or the Newlands were substantially likely to succeed on the merits. Newland v.  Sebelius, 881 F. Supp. 2d 1287, 1296-97 (D. Colo. 2012). It applied a relaxed preliminary injunction standard that allows relief without a showing of likelihood of success. Under the relaxed standard, a district court may grant a preliminary injunction when "the equities tip strongly in favor" of the party seeking the injunction and the merits questions "are so serious, substantial, difficult, and doubtful as to make the issue ripe for litigation and deserving of more deliberate investigation." Id. at 1294 (quoting Okla. ex rel. Okla. Tax Comm'n v. Int'l Registration Plan, Inc., 455 F.3d 1107, 1113 (10th Cir. 2006)). It is not necessary for us to determine whether the relaxed standard applies because, as we explain below, our decision in Hobby Lobby resolves the likelihood of success factor in Hercules's favor.

Under RFRA, the government may not "substantially burden a person's exercise of religion" unless it shows that the law or regulation "is the least restrictive means of furthering [a] compelling governmental interest." 42 U.S.C. § 2000bb-1. To succeed on the merits of its RFRA claim, Hercules must show that (1) it is a person protected under RFRA; (2) compliance with the Regulation would substantially burden its religion; and (3) HHS cannot show that the Regulation is the least restrictive means to meet a compelling government interest.<sup>1</sup>

&lt;sup>1</sup> In this case and in Hobby Lobby, individual and corporate plaintiffs raised the same claims. In Hobby Lobby, this court resolved the RFRA claim as to the corporate plaintiffs without reaching the individual plaintiffs' claims. See 723 F.3d at 1126 n.4. "[T]here is no dispute that relief as to [Hercules] would satisfy the [Newlands]." Id. Continued . . .

Given our decision in Hobby Lobby, Hercules can likely meet all three elements of its RFRA claim. Our precedent holds that Hercules is a "person" within the meaning of RFRA, the Regulation substantially burdens its religious exercise, and the Regulation fails to satisfy strict scrutiny. See Hobby Lobby, 723 F.3d at 1121, 1128, 1142-43.

B. Irreparable Harm

The district court concluded that Hercules made a strong showing that "the injury complained of is of such imminence that there is a clear and present need for equitable relief to prevent irreparable harm." Newland, 881 F. Supp. 2d at 1294 (emphasis omitted) (quotations omitted).

This court concluded in Hobby Lobby that the harm to the corporations' religious liberties as a result of forced compliance with the mandate was irreparable and met this preliminary injunction factor. See 723 F.3d at 1146. Given that decision, we cannot say the district court abused its discretion in making the same conclusion as to Hercules.

C. Balance of Harms

The district court held that the balance of harms tipped in favor of Hercules. To succeed on this third factor, Hercules must show that "the threatened injury outweighs the harm that the preliminary injunction may cause the opposing party." Greater

Cont.

Thus, we need not consider whether the Newlands' individual claims are likely to succeed on the merits.

Yellowstone Coalition v. Flowers, 321 F.3d 1250, 1255 (10th Cir. 2003) (quotations omitted).

The district court stated that the only harm HHS would face from the injunction would be the inability to "enforc[e] regulations that Congress found [to be in] the public interest" and that this harm "pale[d] in comparison to the possible infringement upon [Hercules's] constitutional and statutory rights." Newland, 881 F. Supp. 2d at 1295 (quotations omitted).<sup>2</sup>

We may reverse only if the district court's conclusion was an abuse of discretion. See eBay Inc. v. MercExchange, LLC, 547 U.S. 388, 394 (2006) ("[T]he decision whether to grant or deny injunctive relief rests within the equitable discretion of the district courts."). We recognized in Hobby Lobby the considerable importance of a corporation's religious liberty interests. See Hobby Lobby, 723 F.3d at 1145-46. Hobby Lobby also concluded that HHS's interest in enforcing the Regulation was not compelling. Id. at 1143-44.

The district court in the present case failed to address the government's interests of safeguarding the public health, protecting the statutory rights of affected employees, and ensuring the uniform enforcement of health care and employment regulations. We cannot say, however, in light of the Hobby Lobby decision, that its conclusion on the balance of harms was an abuse of discretion.

D. Public Interest

The district court concluded that "public interest in the free exercise of religion" supported the preliminary injunction. Newland, 881 F. Supp. 2d at 1295. It considered HHS's argument that a preliminary injunction would harm Congress's public interest goals of "improving the health of women . . . and equalizing the coverage of preventive services for women and men." Id. (quotations omitted). But the district court reasoned that the current regulations exempting many employers, such as small businesses, from the Regulation dilute these interests. It held that the public interest favors the preliminary injunction.

Once again, our review standard is abuse of discretion, which "occurs only when the trial court bases its decision on an erroneous conclusion of law or where there is no rational basis in the evidence for the ruling." Awad, 670 F.3d at 1125 (quotations omitted). The district court applied the correct legal standard, and the evidence provides a rational basis for the ruling. We therefore cannot say that it abused its discretion in holding that this preliminary injunction factor favored Hercules.

III. CONCLUSION

We conclude that the district court did not abuse its discretion in granting the preliminary injunction to Hercules. We therefore affirm and remand to the district court. Given the pending petition for certiorari before the Supreme Court in Hobby Lobby, the district court is instructed to abate further proceedings until the Supreme Court completes its consideration of the Hobby Lobby case. At that time, the abatement may be lifted and the court may undertake all proceedings necessary to resolve the issues remaining before it. Finally, appellees' motion to hear this matter with the Hobby Lobby proceeding is denied as moot.
